A black and white photograph of an archaeological site. In the center, a dirt path or trench runs vertically. To the left of the path, a stone wall is visible, constructed from irregular, light-colored stones. A scale bar with alternating light and dark segments is positioned vertically to the left of the wall. A small white label with black text is placed on the dirt path, with a white arrow pointing towards the wall. The background is filled with dark, loose soil and scattered stones. A thin white line, possibly a string or wire, runs diagonally across the scene from the top left to the bottom right.
